Sandy has been working in the hospitality interior design sector since she graduated in September 2004 with a Bachelor of Arts in Interior Architecture. It was not a deliberate decision she had made to pursue a career in hospitality design, but rather, in her own words, "it just happened". And she has not looked back since.

"Hospitality design presents many challenges and a certain level of complexity due to its nature of operation. That is precisely why it is so exciting as you are constantly on an overdrive trying to push design boundaries."

Currently working as an assistant designer in Lim.Teo+Wilkes Design Works, an international interior design consultancy firm specialising in hospitality projects, Sandy works closely alongside her senior project designers and team members in the development of various projects. Projects she has worked on, both local and international, include Rasa Sayang Penang (Resort), W Hotel Shanghai, and Scotts Square Singapore (Residential). Other on-going projects include Marco Polo Hotel Chengdu and Crowne Plaza Hotel Seoul.

Sandy attributes her resilient attitude towards her work to the school's programme and her lecturers in Raffles Design Institute.

"With the guidance from my lecturers, many whom have professional working experience, I came out to the industry prepared, having gained not only academic knowledge, but also valuable skills such as analytical and presentation skills that really helped me in my course of work. Studying at Raffles Design Institute has indeed been a great experience."
